Description

Crossing the threshold of this hotel means immersing yourself in a Seville known to only a select few. Comprising of 27 traditional houses it has 134 different rooms which are linked through 40 patios, gardens and a labyrinth of small passageways. Its name, Hotel Las Casas de la Juderia, is due to the fact that it is located in the heart of the old jewish quarter and is just minutes away from the main landmarks such as the Cathedral, the Giralda, the Royal Alcázar and the House of Pilatos among others.

The remains of pedestals, Roman statues, amphoras, earthenware jugs, antiques and original furniture decorate each of its corners and afford it a unique atmosphere. As such, getting lost in this labyrinth of alleys - some of which were main roads - is one of the best pleasures that can only be enjoyed here
